Alfie Kohn ... No contest is a plea made when the defendant does not want to admit guilt, yet does not dispute the charges. Often times, a no contest plea will be used in a plea bargaining deal. In such a case, the defendant does not admit guilt, but is willing to accept sentencing as agreed with the prosecutor, as though a guilty plea had been entered. The defendant is frequently offered lesser charges, or a lesser sentence if he pleads no contest or guilty, as this saves time and money that would be ... Again, the research — which I review in my book No Contest: The Case Against Competition — helps to explain the destructive effect of win/lose arrangements. When children compete, they are less able to take the perspective of others — that is, to see the world from someone else's point of view. The Case Against Competition - Alfie Kohn A no-contest plea, known often by its Latin name "nolo contendere," has the same primary legal effects as a guilty plea. If you plead no contest to a criminal charge, you will have a conviction on your record, just as though you had pleaded guilty or been convicted after a trial. A potentially big advantage of a no-contest plea compared to a guilty plea has historically been that a no-contest plea could not be offered into evidence in a civil case.
