Software architecture descriptions are commonly organized into views, which are analogous to the different types of blueprints made in building architecture.Each view addresses a set of system concerns, following the conventions of its viewpoint, where a viewpoint is a specification that describes the notations, modeling, and analysis techniques to use in a view that expresses the architecture

A digital map is a representation of a city. Image by Google. What is a sitemap? It's possible to define two types of sitemaps—a visual sitemap that you create before building a website and an XML file that contains a list of the pages on your website.. Visual sitemaps are a hierarchical diagram that shows the information architecture of a website.

An architectural pattern is a general, reusable solution to a commonly occurring problem in software architecture within a given context. The architectural patterns address various issues in software engineering, such as computer hardware performance limitations, high availability and minimization of a business risk. Some architectural patterns have been implemented within software frameworks.
